BioOne and JSTOR for ABLS members

August 20, 2009

ABLS members who subscribe to The Bryologist are given internet access to electronic versions of The Bryologist through BioOne and JSTOR as a member benefit.

For members who do not have access yet, they must provide an email address on their membership dues form to the Secretary/Treasurer, who informs BioOne and JSTOR through Allen Press. They will then be sent an email from Allen Press how to set up “MyBioOne” and “MYJSTOR” accounts. From then on the login and password access is the responsibility of the member.

For members who have access through a subscribing institution you do not need access through ABLS/Allen Press. You do not need MyBioOne and MyJSTOR accounts unless you need access from home or an off-site location.

Members who have problems accessing their accounts online during the year, e.g. if they change their email address during the year or forget their login and passwords, should contact helpdesk@allenpress.com NOT the ABLS Sec/Treas. You will be asked for a member number but they already have all the ABLS member numbers. Tell them this and to contact Christina Berger for the member number if the person at the help desk does not know this. The ABLS Sec/Treas has already provided the member numbers to Allen Press. The JSTOR help desk is at www.jstor.org/page/info/help/access/index.jsp.
